MISCELLANEOUS READING. A GOLDEN WEDDING SONG. Guided and guarded by our God, Two pilgrims have together trod, Now bright with smiles, now wet with tears, Life's chequered path for fifty years. This is their 'golden wedding' day-

And you, dear friends, give loving cheers, To crown their march of fifty years. How few of us saw blushing bride And joyous groom stand side by side We had not known life's hopes and fears.

So long ago as fifty years. Their fates were woven into one Ere our first threads of life were spun. And rich and rare the west appears, With golden warps of fifty years.

Ring out, O bells, your sweetest lay!

There's frost upon their honor'd heads, The silvery rhyme that nature spreads; But from their hearts the tide careers Unchecked, unchill'd, for fitty years. This is their 'golden wedding' day-

Now let us hush our song, and pray That He whose love their lot endears. Whose grace has filled their fifty years-May guide them still, and still ordain Each cup of biss, or chast'ning pain;

May soothe their griefs or wipe their tears Though many more than fifty years. And when life's pilgrimage is done, And life's last goal is bravely won, Take them to dwell in those bright spheres

Where moments grow in fifty years! THE LATE HENRY BEDINGER He died, at home, and in the very midst of those who appreciated him in all life's relations. and he now sleeps where the rushing waters of the noble Potemac will continually sing a requiem to his memory. We give below his own verses, which so teelingly attest his devotion to his home and to the river along whose banks he had so often strayed in the bright and happy days of his boyhood: Wee Potomac, mid the mountains Prattling, toddling like a child, Nourished by the singing fountains, Feeding thee with music wild!

Noble river! I am praying Once again thy banks to see. Where from morn till evening straying My young footsteps wont to be.

Where, with one, since passed to Heaven,

I have culled such precious flowers.

To this weary life of ours. Ah, when this sad life is ended-This dull dream of pain is o'er-When my heart with dust is blended, Let me rest upon thy shore!

As alas! are rarely given
